Mrs. Juliet Ashmead.

News reached here last week of the death of Mrs. Juliet Ashmead, mother of Rev. W. N. R. Ashmead, who had been rector of the Church of the Prince of Peace of this place for a number of years. She had been with her son while here—a devoted mother—and became endeared to all who knew her. She had a lovable personality which won her warm friends to whom the news of her death came as a personal loss. She died at the rectory at Easton, N. J., on Saturday morning, Jan. 21, aged sixty-five years. The cause of death was heart trouble. She had been a sufferer from this cause while here, and had specially suffered during the last two months of her life. The maiden name of Mrs. Ashmead was Miss Robins. She was born at Minersville, Pa., and lived there until her marriage to Thomas E. Ashmead, of Philadelphia, who as an officer in the navy served at a number of naval stations and died some years ago. The funeral services were held at the rectory on Monday of last week and interment was made at Minersville. Rev. W. N. R. Ashmead, rector of St. James Episcopal church, of Easton, was the only child of deceased and it was during his rectorship the beautiful church of the Prince of Peace of this place was completed.

Anthony Zellinger.

Anthony Zellinger died at the residence of his son-in-law, Jacob Ross, of York, on last Thursday afternoon after suffering several weeks from gangrene aged 84 years, 7 months and 13 days. Infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miller, of Buford avenue, died from membranous croup on last Saturday morning. Funeral took place on Sunday.

Railroad Troubles.

The railroads have been having troubles of their own not only all over the country but also in this neck of the woods. The blizzard last week closed a number of the cuts even shut on the railroads entering this place.

The evening train due here at 6.29 on the Western Maryland R. R. last Wednesday evening got as far as Emory Grove, when it stuck fast in a cut and spent the night. Dr. J. W. C. O'Neal was one of the 30 passengers on board. He says they kept warm and that a number of young people kept things merry, they teased an Irishman until he got mad and then the conductor had to take a turn with the Irishman.

Thursday and Friday were busy days in opening of the railroads. The snow plow of the Western Maryland R. R. was driven by three engines. The trains were covered with ice and snow and presented picturesque appearances upon their arrivals.

On Saturday three cars and a caboose went down the side of Jack's Mountain as told in the Iron Springs news.

Monday evening the W. M. R. R. was blocked at East Berlin Junction by a car off the track. It occurred after the afternoon trains had passed that point so that when the 6.29 train reached there no train was on the other side of the obstruction and traffic was blocked until way was cleared.

The only engine on the Berlin Branch R. R. sprung a leak on its way to Berlin Junction, on day last week, and stranded about a mile from the Junction. Some of the passengers walked to the latter point.

Church News

The revival services in the Methodist Episcopal church, conducted by Pastor Rev. Wm. W. Hartman and begun three weeks ago are still in progress. ## SEWERS-INSURANCE-LUMBER

DR. H. W. SCHWARTZ NON-SUITED IN HIS SEWER CASE.

Geo. A. Trimmer Loses Insurance Note Case—Lumber Case Goes Against N. H. Musselman.

As reported last week, two of the twelve cases on trial list of civil actions were settled and five were continued, leaving five to be disposed of by trial.

Wednesday morning a jury was called and sworn in case of John L. Bosserman, trustee, vs. John Wolf, Henry Bowman. The case had been on the trial list for over three years and was continued by parties. The case was brought to determine right of plaintiff to a supposed resulting trust of $3000 in a Reading township farm, for which ejection had been brought. By consent the jury found a verdict in favor of defendants, no testimony being heard, defendants agreeing to pay costs. J. L. Butt and S. S. Neely, Esqs., were attorneys for plaintiff and Chas. S. Duncan, Esq., for defendants.

Sewer Case.

A jury was next selected to try the case of trespass for $500 damages of Dr. Henry W. Schwartz of New Oxford, vs. Mary A. Smith and Oliver A. Smith of same place. The trespass complained of was alleged to be the tapping and entering the sewer of plaintiff. The plaintiff on stand detailed the building of a sewer fourteen years ago. How he had proposed the building of same, how others became interested, how a meeting was called and ten citizens of the town agreed to build the sewer, the cost of which was not to exceed $55 to each party. Any excess the plaintiff contended he would have had to pay but the fact was that plaintiff paid no more than the rest. In 1903 Oliver A. Smith desired to run into this sewer and Dr. Schwartz objected, notifying him he could not enter it, but Mr. Smith paid $35 to one who had been a kind of secretary in the body of men originally building the sewer and went ahead and joined the sewer. Under the original papers signed Dr. Schwartz contended he had more ownership and authority than the others and hence was in a position to say what could be done and sue for damages in trespass after act was done. When plaintiff's case was closed the defendant made a motion for non suit, for reason that Dr. Schwartz did not own sewer, but sewer was owned by a company of men, of which he was a partner, and that $35, price of entry, having been paid to this company by defendant he had legally entered the sewer. The motion was sustained by the court and a compulsory nonsuit ordered to be entered in case. Geo. J. Benner, Esq., for plaintiff and W. C. Sheely, Esq., for defendant.

Insurance Case.

Four attorneys were engaged in the trial of the next case, one involving the sum of $29.22, being action of assumpsit on a note brought by George A. Trimmer, payee, of York Springs, vs. Charles L. Miller and J. E. Richter, makers, living in Berwick township. The plaintiff had sold defendants an insurance policy for $1000 and taken a note for $29.22 as premium for first year. The defendants alleged that misrepresentations had been made to them by Trimmer to get them to take the policy and after receipt of same they notified Trimmer that policy was not as he had represented to them and that he should cancel it and return the note. The question for determination of jury was whether defendants were liable on their note or whether they were relieved from liability by reason of misrepresentations made about policy so as to get them to sign note. The jury took latter view and rendered a verdict in favor of the defendants. J. L. Butt and J. L. Williams, Esqs., for plaintiff and Geo. J. Benner and E. A. Weaver, Esqs., for defendants.

Lumber Case.

This case was between James C. Cole and Dr. George Tate, trading as Tate and Cole, plaintiffs represented by R. E. Wible and Geo. J. Benner, Esqs., against N. H. Musselman, defendant represented by W. C. Sheely, Esq. The suit was an action of assumpsit for 11,000 feet of lumber worth as plaintiffs alleged $275. This lumber was shipped from Biglerville to Langle and Sons of Brooklyn, who inspected it and refused to accept it at the above price but finally did receive it for $162.35, which was sent to defendant and turned over by him to plaintiffs. The suit was for recovery of balance $112.65 and plaintiffs contended that the whole bill of lumber was sold to defendant and he was responsible for their claim and defendant contended that he had given order of Langle and Sons to plaintiffs and alleged plaintiffs had taken risk of shipment. The jury decided defendant bought lumber of plaintiffs and brought in a verdict in their favor against defendant for the amount claimed and interest.

Providence Continues Case.

The last case to be tried was that of Daniel P. Wagner vs. Wm. T. Spangler. All the witnesses of plaintiff had been heard in chief and that side had rested. All the witnesses but one for the defendant in chief had been heard. The case began on Friday and when the last witness, David Gulden, was called he was not in the court room. Dr. F. C. Wolf of East Berlin stated to the Court that the witness had been overtaken on the streets of Gettysburg with paralysis of the vocal cords. He had found the Doctor and wrote that he had lost his voice and wanted to know what was the matter. Dr. Wolf took witness to office of Dr. Walter H. O'Neal, where his throat was carefully examined and it was found that vocal cords had been paralyzed. This condition was sworn to. The news came like a clap of thunder to both sides. The defendant and his attorneys consulted and then said to Court that they could not safely go to trial without David Gulden, who was a most material witness. The plaintiff's counsel insisted upon the trial being finished and was willing to let any statement go to jury that other side would say the witness would testify to. Doctor Wolf said the witness could be brought into court room and could write his answers to any question asked. The Court said parties were entitled to have witness articulate his evidence and pronouncing the cause to be an act of God continued the case, the costs to abide the final result.

Prisoners Sentenced.

The four prisoners who plead guilty to the indictments against them were sentenced by the Court on Saturday afternoon.

John Winters, who had plead guilty to an assault and battery on Sarah Ellen Slusser, who had escaped from Constable Keffer of McSherrystown, followed by an exciting chase and recaptured a week later, was considered an all around bad man and the Court told him that he must be made an example of and severely punished. He was given eight months in jail and to pay the costs.

Samuel B. Light, who had plead guilty to an assault and battery on Maggie Laughman, had been in jail for two months and a half. It was represented to court that defendant had been a peaceful citizen and that prosecutrix at times was known to say rather irrational things. The sympathy of the community in which parties lived was all with the defendant. The Court sentenced prisoner to ten days further in jail and to pay the costs.

David M. Nary, who had plead guilty to adultery was next called. The Court inquired whether he was not the same party who had been charged with same offence with his mother-in-law a short time ago, but whom the Court had allowed to go rather than have a very young son of the woman testify against his mother. Being assured of identity of prisoner he remarked that the advice then given had fallen on stony ground and he would give prisoner punishment to the full extent of the law. Sentence was one year in jail.

Lizzie Sponseller, now Mrs. Darr was the next prisoner. The court told her she had been an anomaly to the court, that her career of a year or two had exceeded anything ever known in the memory of the court in this town. He warned her that now as Mrs. Darr she was in a different position than she had been as Lizzie Sponseller. That for the charge of fornication to which she had plead guilty he could give but a light sentence, but if she ever proved untrue to her husband and was brought to court, the charge would be more serious and she might expect a heavy sentence. She was sentenced to a fine of $10 and the costs.

Current Business

Com. vs. Frank Hartlaub, charge surety of the peace on information of Mary C. Caler was heard Saturday afternoon. It was alleged he had said to a small son of prosecutrix that he would break his head and by reason thereof they were afraid of him. The Court sentenced defendant to enter into $200 bail to keep the peace for one year and pay the costs of prosecution.

SUNDAY FIRE NEAR TOWN

BARN ON FARM OF HENRY OSBORN DESTROYED.

B. F. Kepner, Tenant, Loses One Horse and One Cow and all His Produce.

Sunday afternoon the fire bell, though its sound was husky on account of the weather or by reason of a new rope that was not working quite right, announced a fire. Quite a crowd soon gathered and some of the apparatus was taken out, but the fire was too far away, though it appeared near.

The fire was in Straban township on the other side of Rock creek. The barn on the farm of Henry Osborn, tenanted by B. F. Kepner, was in a blaze when alarm was given.

Mr. Kepner says he was at his barn a short time before the fire started and everything was all right. He went to the house picked up a book and started to read and had been reading but a short time when the odor of smoke reached him. He began to investigate to discover that the southern end of his barn where there was a straw stack had burst into flames.

Mr. Kepner and the other members of the family at once began to save what they could. They opened the horse and cow stables and succeeded in saving all the animals but one horse and one cow. The fire completely destroyed the barn, rather an old structure, straw pile at one end and two hay stacks at the other end of the barn. A wagon shed was threatened at one time but was saved. Mr. Kepner lost all farm produce in barn and his farming implements.

The fire attracted a great crowd of visitors from this place and surrounding country.

The barn was insured by Henry Osborn, in the Mummasburg Mutual Fire Protection Society, for $500 with a small amount on his share of crops. B. F. Kepner had some insurance, exact amount has not been learned.

About one o'clock on last Wednesday night, at the wildest moment of the blizzard this town was nearly awakened by an alarm of fire. The chimney in the house of Dr. J. W. C. O'Neal, near the old reservoir on Stratton street, tenanted by Marcus Hamilton took fire and the flames shot many feet out of the chimney. Several neighbors gathered to give assistance if it should be needed. At one time the question of ringing the bell was considered, the roar of the fire was so great, but it went out with no more result than a somewhat frightened family.

The Smallpox Cases.

Dr. George L. Rice of McSherrystown the officer of the State Board of Health, visited Cumberland township a third time on Wednesday of last week. Upon examination he affirmed the diagnosis of the Howard Weikert case to be correct, being afflicted with small-pox in a mild form like the other cases. The house of Alex Hoffman where Mr. Weikert lives was quarantined. Dr. Rice visited other places where there was any suspicion of any further outbreak of small-pox and ordered all the places to be strictly quarantined. He told the Board of School Directors of what he had done. He advised a constant guard to see that the quarantine was effective.

The School Board of Cumberland township have appointed David Tipton constable of that township their sanitary agent, and agreed to pay him for his services $12 a week. It becomes the duty of this agent to carry out all the orders of the Health officers and keep guard to prevent any break of quarantine regulations.

A petition was presented to court on Saturday, asking the court to approve the appointment of constable Tipton and amount of his compensation as the law requires and the court in approving same remarked it gave the court pleasure to approve of the prompt and vigorous methods adopted to suppress the disease.

Horse Had to be Killed.

Dorsey Dougherty of the firm of Dougherty and Hartley had to kill his well known black driving horse one day last week. Mr. and Mrs. Dougherty had gone up to visit the latter's parents near Arendtsville. The roads were very bad and while there they started away in sleigh and had gone but a short distance when sleigh upset. The horse started to run and rushing toward the barn struck its head tearing open a great hole, so that they were forced to shoot it to put it out of its misery. Mr. and Mrs. Dougherty were no worse for the upset.

Snider with violin accompaniment which was very much enjoyed by all until 11 p. m., when they bade each other good night, hoping to meet all at the next anniversary. ### Poems by Dr. Joel Swartz.

The COMPILER acknowledges the receipt of a book of 237 pages "Poems" by Rev. Dr. Joel Swartz, pastor of St. James Lutheran Church in this place some years ago and published by Henry T. Coates and Company, Philadelphia. It gives great pleasure to add this volume to our library, not only on account of the many pleasant recollections associated with Dr. Swartz, but also by reason of the poetic worth and thought coursing through his poems. Coupled with graceful rhythm there is beautiful and cheering thought and sentiment in every line. The volume is divided into five parts: Poems of Nature, Poems of Meditation and Reflection, Poems of Love at Home, Poems of Temperance and Musings for the Quiet Hours. The volume is dedicated by a graceful poem to his wife. Here is one with a message to those whose homes have been on the farm.

THE OLD DINNER HORN.

I've heard many a note that has thrilled me with joy,
But none, but let me say, since the day I was born,
Has pleased me so greatly as when a small boy,
I heard, on the farm, from the old dinner horn.

The tube was of tin, 'twas a yard or so long,
'Twas blown for "the boys" at the noon and the morn, Its monotone din was a "Welcome, come in—Come in my dear boys, to the sound of the horn!"

A mother's fond lips pressed the trumpet of tin,
She blew her full soul through the barley and corn;
"The dumplings are steaming, the apples are in;
Come in," was her call, "to the sound of the horn!"

But the harvest is reaped and the fences are made,
And gone are the farmers who furrowed the corn,
And all save myself in the graveyard are laid,
Beside the dear mother who wended the horn.

The trumpet of tin—now a precious heirloom,
Though dented and battered and homely and old,
I keep as a token of mother and home,
And boyhood's bright hours, more precious than gold.

Copies of volume can be had at store of Geo. W. Spangler, south east corner of Center Square, Gettysburg, at 75 cents and $1.00, latter gilt edged.

Mad Dog Situation.

Jim Woodward, Jr., was employed last week by borough authorities as a special dog killer. He was to get 50 cents for every dog killed and buried. It seemed to the authorities that the policemen had not gathered in as large a harvest of dogs as the available crop indicated could be gathered. Then there was the trouble to the policeman to look up some one to hold a funeral for every dog killed. So it seemed simpler to have the killing and burial pooled. Jim Woodward started in earnest and the first day saw six dogs dispatched but the way the work was done showed that he had been no respecter of dogs, or rather whose dogs he killed. He just gathered in all that were clearly out of order according to borough orders. There was so much fuss kicked up that this special officer was heard to say "that he was out of it, and he wouldn't kill another dog if they paid him $10 a day."

Dr. Glenn, of Fairfield, was sent for and reached him while he still lived and said he was suffering from a very severe stroke of paralysis and that death was inevitable. He was a soldier in the civil war and belonged to the G. A. R., Post of Fairfield and enjoyed the highest respect of every one that knew him. The funeral was held Friday morning, Rev. E. W. Stonebraker conducting services in Reformed church at Fairfield with interment in Cemetery at that place. His wife, who was Sophia Mertz died about 15 years ago. On Sunday evening he complained of feeling ill, though he had enjoyed his usual health during the day. The illness did not prevent him from doing the evening's feeding and other chores. After he returned to house he laid down on the lounge and again remarked that he still felt very badly. His wife left the house and going to a neighbors asked latter to go for Dr. E. K. Foreman of Littlestown. Upon return of wife to the house she found her husband had rolled to floor in a spasm. Dr. Foreman arrived in a short time and any attempt of the physician to handle the patient would cause him to go into a convulsion. Upon the advice of the doctor to procure assistance the wife left house a second time to secure same and came back in a few moments to find that her husband had expired while the doctor was doing his utmost to prolong his life. ## DISFIGURED WITH ECZEMA

Under Physicians Five Months. Went from Bad to Worse.

CURED BY CUTICURA

Wonderful Change in One Night. In a Month Face Was Clean as Ever.

"I was troubled with eczema on the face for five months, during which time I was in the care of physicians. My face was in such a condition that I could not go out. It was going from bad to worse and I gave up all hope, when a friend of mine highly recommended Cuticura remedies. The first night after I washed my face with Cuticura Soap and used Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Resolvent it changed wonderfully, and continuing the treatment it removed all scales and scabs. From that day I was able to go out, and in a month my face was as clean as ever."

THE AGONIZING

Itching and Burning of the Skin

That Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills are such stands proven beyond all doubt. The purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty of speedy and permanent cure, the absolute safety and great economy have made them the standard skin cures of the civilized world. Absolutely pure.

THE IRON BRIGADE

son's and ammunition wagons, all in full retreat. The pinch of the fight, the crowning hour of the day, the bloodiest battle of all the 40 hours of thrilling combat, is here on the slope to the north of the seminary, where, from the teeth of the foe, from the midst of their slaughtered horses, the men of the west essay to drag and save their pets, their comrades in every fight and field, the black-mouthed, smoking, heated, still thundering guns of battery "B."

Davis and Daniel—two fighting southern brigadiers they—are riding madly among their powder-stained men; driving them on in the face of those stubborn wild westerners; pointing their swords at the crippled guns, where men are straining at the wheels and slashing at the harness of the slaughtered horses. "Get those guns!" shriek the leaders. "Square accounts for the battle-flags lost in the cut!" But, between the surging rush of Carolina, Mississippi and Georgia, with the supporting Virginians at their back, and that battle-scarred battery limping slowly away down the pike, there still interposes that stern, indomitable, magnificent line in blue—all that is left of the Iron Brigade—as, front to the foe, closing ever on its colors, volleying steadily, defiantly, unflinchingly into the very face of its outnumbering, yet respectful, pursuers, it backs away over the ridge, leaving over a third of its membership strewing its tracks, another third having already been borne bleeding away toward the town, and so, as the sun goes down on the tremendous day, so, slowly, steadily, wrapped in clouds of its own battle-smoke, the eastern brigade descends to the plain, the Sixth last to halt in the streets of the town and to cheer to the echo the cause of the flag, while the guns once more unlimber on the rise of Cemetery Hill, as though daring the foemen to come on and take them. No wonder the Badgers grip hands with the Wolverines, they that remain. Almost 500 of the Michigan men went into the fight by the side of the veterans. Only 100 are left in line when at last the day is done. Fully 800 have been shot down on the field; some few have been captured. In officers alone their dead outnumber those of the rest of the brigade. Of the Black Hats surviving there stand now but 70.

"And they might have cut you off entirely," says Doubleday, as he rides among the remnants, halting along the wooded hillside, east of their rescued guns. "Buford saw, what you couldn't see through the smoke, that two brigades were sweeping down south of the seminary to intercept you. He formed his squadrons to charge. They saw it, by jove! and halted and formed squares to resist him, and that saved you. Capt. Benton, I wish you would ride over and present my compliments and thanks to Gen. Buford. He's just moving off past that stone farm house yonder down in the valley." And so ended the day.

The Warning of Tradition.

Senator Hoar's death, observes "Collier's" for January 28, is a very fit event for the United States Senate to commemorate.

In getting aside January 28 for eulogies, the Senate intended to show respect for an eminent member. It incidentally calls attention to the moral differences between Senator Hoar and many of those who remain to decorate our august high chamber. The Senate is undoubtedly the great stronghold of money pull. For any measure opposed by great corporations to pass

A CONFIDENTIAL CHAT.

"It's perfect nonsense, Bessie, for you to talk of being laid on the shelf. Why, it all depends on yourself. Forget your worries, your aches and ailments; do as I did, take plenty of out-of-door air, cultivate happiness by not allowing your mind to dwell on the trifles and the worries of life. I sent thirty-one cents in stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., for his 'Common Sense Medical Adviser' and found it contained much useful information about the care of my health, about physiology, and about everything a woman should know. I then decided to write Dr. Pierce and tell him all about my ailments. I received such a nice, carefully considered and confidential letter, in reply, giving me advice about my diet, exercise and all. This advice is free to everyone and I wonder you don't write him at once. It didn't take me many months to regain my good looks. Ever since I was fifteen I have suffered untold agonies periodically, but now I am free from pain, worry and bad temper. Occasionally I took Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets—for the complexion, and to stimulate the liver. Then I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription three times a day for those womanly weaknesses I told you about. That's my secret of beauty. It's the easiest thing in the world to be happy and keep one's good looks. Look at the thousands of women who have been made well by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription; look how they keep their good looks. Dr. Pierce offers $500 reward for any case of Leucorrhoea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb which he cannot cure. All he asks is a fair and reasonable trial of his means of cure."

For Thin Babies

Fat is of great account to a baby; that is why babies are fat. If your baby is scrawny, Scott's Emulsion is what he wants. The healthy baby stores as fat what it does not need immediately for bone and muscle. Fat babies are happy; they do not cry; they are rich; their fat is laid up for time of need. They are happy because they are comfortable. The fat surrounds their little nerves and cushions them. When they are scrawny those nerves are hurt at every ungentle touch. They delight in Scott's Emulsion. It is as sweet as wholesome to them.

the Senate is almost an impossibility. Hence the strength of the feeling for the popular election of Senators, a feeling which is likely to find some way of translating itself into fact. Even when there is no money involved, the Senate seems determined to show itself in the guise of a stupid obstacle, as in its opposition to the arbitration treaties, for which it was so justly reprimanded by the President. As it is easier to buy a Legislature than a population, we believe in the election of the Senators by the people. If Addicks should be sent to the Senate by Delaware, one more warning would be given to the world of the unfitness of the body as it is now composed. Niedringhaus of Missouri would never have been thought of if he had been poor. It is much to be desired that Governor La Follette should go to Washington if he decides that his measures in Wisconsin are safe without his presence there. He would throw much unwelcome light on interesting transactions, and therefore, whether his opinions were sound or unsound, his presence would be wholesome. For this same reason we should be glad to see Mr. Bryan ultimately represent Nebraska in the Senate. The one fact that former Governor Buikley has obtained the Senatorship from Connecticut shows what we have to face. His record ought to have put him out of public life. Popular opinion was shocked by the choice, and the explanation given for his victory is the power of an insurance company and a railroad.

Industry May Leave County.

Mercersburg may capture one of the industries of this county. Mr. Jacob Heltzel, of New Oxford, contemplates taking his manufacturing plant to that place. He needs more help, in the way of operators, than he can get at New Oxford, and thinks that town can supply that need. The work done at present is making ladies' wrappers and waists for a firm in one of the large cities. There is no selling of the product, hence no risks or expense along that line. Besides the work done in the factory there is much work that can be done at the homes of the people, the garments being taken to them and returned to the factory after the work has been done. It gives employment to 30 or 40 people. A committee of citizens of Mercersburg, was appointed to solicit contributions for purchase of ground and erection of a suitable building.

Bear in South Mountain.

There is a bear at large in the South Mountains and the bear hunters are hot on the trail but have not yet come up with him though they have been searching for days. The chase was abandoned after the big bear had crossed the Potomac into West Virginia, recrossed to Maryland a mile further down the stream, galloped friskily across Antietam battlefield toward the town of Rohrer'sville and disappeared in the underbrush at the base of the South Mountain range. The creature en route to the mountain fastnesses stopped on the farm of Charles Ryan and devoured two sheep.

Our enterprising buggy man A. C. Miller received two car loads of buggies, forty in number. The shipment also included several surreys and a few stick wagons.

The new canning factory is now finished. The machinery was started last week and everything found in good running order. The stockholders are now being asked for full amount of their subscriptions so as to pay all the bills. It will certainly pay if farmers will raise the sweet corn and vegetables, tomatoes, peas and beans to keep it in full operation.

A Convertible Street Car.

A patent has been granted W. A. McCarrell for a convertible street car. The patentee is the eldest son of Rev. W. A. McCarrell, D. D., pastor of the Shippensburg Presbyterian congregation. For several years Mr. McCarrell has held a position in the office of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Altoona as a draft man. The idea is a car for street railway purposes which can be used for summer or winter. This is one of the simplest and most convenient yet brought to public notice. In a few moments time, without tools or appliances, summer cars can be changed into one for winter use. This will be most convenient in early spring and fall, when cold and blustery days come on us unawares, as well as wet days and during storms. The specifications set forth among numerous other advantages claimed, "that the invention provides simple and improved means whereby the comfort of the public is concerned by reason of permitting an open car to be quickly closed into a storm car upon the occasion of sudden storms." Mr. McCarrell has not only had letters patent granted in the United States, but also in the Dominion of Canada.

The Ride of Their Lives.

Seated in a small express wagon, attached to the tail end of a freight train by a handkerchief and bit of rope and bumping along over the ties, two seven-year-old boys had the ride of their lives last week, in New Jersey.

While a freight train on the West Jersey & Seashore Railroad was shifting cars Russell Broker and Leslie Montgomery, unobserved, hitched their express wagon to the caboose. When the train pulled away from the station the boys seated in the wagon went along.

After a half mile of lively riding a member of the train crew discovered the youngsters and stopped the train. Then the lads and their wagon were sent home.

Dined Off White House Gold.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained the Diplomatic Corps at dinner at the White House last Thursday night. Covers were laid for more than 60 persons. The golden table service was used conspicuous among the pieces being a long mirror plateau in the centre filled with Brazilian orchids, ferns and lilies of the valley. A section of the Marine Band played during the evening.

Catarrh caused difficulty in speaking and to a great extent loss of hearing. By the use of Ely's Cream Balm dropping of mucus has ceased, voice and hearing have greatly improved.—J. W. Davidson, Atty at law, Monmouth, Ill.

THE IRON BRIGADE

GENERAL CHARLES KING, NOVELIST IN A LATE STORY

Tells The Tale of The Great Fight of The Iron Brigade at Gettysburg.

O what a day was that first of July!—warm, soft, sunshiny, the roads still puddly in places as from recent rains—no dust to choke the hurrying columns, no thick clay mud to clog the wheels or load the worn brogans. Even before the earliest sunbeams came glinting through the eastward wood, Reynolds had called on his men and they presently went tramping away northward between moist, smiling fields and orchards, heading for the distant towers of the quaint little Pennsylvania town. Somewhere up that charming valley their leaders knew John Buford to be for he and his sun-tanned troopers had been thrown ahead to cover the advance and find the army of Lee, well known by this time to be concentrating to meet them.

Years and experience have taught the leaders of the Army of the Potomac something of the true use of cavalry, and there is no more of the blind groping of the old days. They know that Longstreet's whole corps is camping about Chambersburg, across the South Mountain range to the west. They know that Hill is between him and Cashtown, the first village of importance west of Gettysburg. They know that Ewell's foremost divisions have struck the line of the Susquehanna, only to be recalled to meet the spirited northward sweep of Meade's far-spreading corps. They know that these men of Reynolds lead the van of the main army, and will doubtless be the first to reach and back the cavalry when those searching horsemen find and tackle the foe. What they do not know is, that from west, northwest, north and northeast these converging columns are all headed for that same little Pennsylvania town, marching to concentrate on Gettysburg, and that this, the First corps of the Army of the Potomac, is destined within three hours to thrust square in between those swift-closing jaws, and compelled, as Buford says to his own men, to "fight like the devil" until the rest of the army can reach it in support.

In far better fettle and discipline is Lee's brave army than when it tried the conversion of Maryland ten months before. Only in two points is it less to be feared—Stonewall Jackson is dead and Stuart's cavalry is as good, or bad, as lost. For once in his life that brilliant and daring leader of horse is of no use to his commander. Through some error of judgment he has gone far to the east and has been cut off from communication. For once the Army of the Potomac has its eyes and its wits at the front when the eyes, at least, of the Army of Virginia are away to the rear. At breakfast time in Gettysburg, this morn of the first of July, Heth's division of A. P. Hill's corps of the Army of the South comes "bulging" ahead, without the accustomed screen of cavalry skirmishers, and is brought up standing by the challenge of Calef's light guns, planted squarely in the middle of the Cashtown pike, and the simultaneous uprising of squadron on squadron north and south of the road—Devlin's and Gamble's gallant brigades of famous John Buford's division—and there like a bulldog Buford holds them two mortal hours, until Reynolds, with his foremost men, comes spurring up the eastward face of the brigade, joins Buford at the old Lutheran seminary, and notes that the main lines of Heth's division, north and south of the pike, are just forming for advance to the attack in force—all that preceded having been the work of strong skirmish lines—and now begins in grim earnest the greatest and most momentous battle of American history.

First to reach the field in support of Buford's hard-fighting horse is the First division of the First corps of the old Army of the Potomac, and the first brigade to come swarming up the slope is led by old graybeard Cutler, whom we saw at the head of the Sixth Wisconsin in its maiden battle on the Warrenton pike, while, following close at the heels of the foremost and obedient to Reynolds' orders, breasting the height to the south of the seminary, stride the five battalions of the Iron Brigade, the biggest not quite 500, the others barely 300 strong. White-haired Wadsworth rides at the head of little division. That's all there is of it—these two brigades, led by those two far western brigades, barring the batteries that ever go with them—but the blue-blooded old Gothamite in command swears he wouldn't swap it, small as it is, for the strongest division in the whole army—and he means it. It is a sight never to be forgotten, that which greets their eyes as the Black Hats come popping up over the ridge. The westward forest is all alive with flashing bayonets aligned on the little red battle flags, the division of Heth in battle array, reaching almost from pike to pike, with one brigade thrown out "in the air" to the north, and pushing daringly forward to sweep the stubborn troopers, fighting dismounted, out of the way. It is barely quarter past ten, as Reynolds for the last time looks at his watch; bids Doubleday, who has galloped forward for orders, to "back" Wadsworth at the Seminary and extend his line to the right; then, calling on Meredith, points to that forward grove at the brook side, "Seize it," he says, "before the rebels can reach it!" Then with the Sixth in reserve, with a full-lunged shout in its throat and fire in its eye, the old brigade breaks into a run, Fairchild with the Black Hats in the van—a 500 yard race for the goal—field, staff and commanders cheering them on, and Reynolds—noble Reynolds—spurring swift in the lead, riding down to his soldier's fate.

The Fight For the Guns. Of Heth's division we have said, are these at the front—fellows that never yet have happened to "sample" this western command—Heth's division, with the brigades of Archer and Davis in the foremost line. The former has started his Tennesseeans down the slope, Alabama supporting, and is feeling his way to the front, for that wood looks ominous. Skirmishers, say Gamble's dismounted troopers, who have held it two hours against their best shooting, are strengthened now by infantry, thrown forward by old Cutler's first line, which can be seen stretching out over the pike, relieving Devlin's worn men, and letting their scurry back to their waiting horses. But Archer sees that in so doing, Cutler has thrust its right flank "into the air,"—that Davis, with his Mississippi battalions, is sweeping upon and around it, and is already in turn far in advance of his own fellows: so, most eagerly, Archer orders forward, forward, and the gray lines leap at the word. Beautifully the battle opens for the cause of the south. Cutler's men, in their eagerness to relieve Buford's thinned and wearied defense, have rushed full 600 yards out into the open, and Davis catches them in flank with his yelling southerners; wheels his Mississippians to their right—Cutler barely having time to slip his skirmishers out of the clutch—then onward come the Johnnies, full tilt for the guns of Hall, unlimbered in place of Calef, on the Cashtown pike. Then two wonderful things happen and two new feathers go to the cap of the Iron Brigade.

It is Fred Benton's luck this day of days to be riding with Reynolds as the corps commander spurs to the front. Reynolds has borrowed him as an aide, and Benton, burping with joy and excitement, rides after him into the grove, just in time to see Archer's foremost line come gallantly sweeping down the opposite slope. "Hang on, men! Keep up your fire! Meredith's right behind you!" shouts Reynolds, as he darts swiftly in among the trees. "Hang on, men!" goes the word from center to flank, but things look risky out there to the right where Cutler's ranks are drifting back. Then, 1,400 strong, the charging ranks of the Iron Brigade come on with a rush. The east edge of the wood is reached by the leaders on the right of the line, just as the southern force bursts through the battle smoke and into the brook; but even as these latter reach the wood, and Archer is cheering them forward, he is amazed to see his wing reeling back, and a blue-capped, blue-bodied human wave curving round the southward end of the straggling timber. Before he can issue an order or strengthen a single battalion, Fairchild and the Black Hats have burst through the sheltering grove in his front, and spring like tigers on his halted and astonished line: while Badger, Hoosier and Wolverine, swinging round him from the south, complete the demolition of the brigade. He and half his force, 600 at least, are prisoners of war, while the rest are chased to the rear by Meredith's men. First faced for Heth as he glares from the opposite woods, where Pettigrew and Brockenbrough are aligned in support. For him, however, there is comfort to the north of the pike, for there has Davis swept the field and is bearing down on the Union guns. Now is the time to support him, but Wadsworth is too quick. Archer disposed of the Iron Brigade halted and reforming under Reynolds' own eyes, the general commanding turns to support the right. He has seen the trouble in a single glance: has seen, too, the way out of it: and in another minute the Sixth Wisconsin is "double-quick" away over the fields to its right in support of the men from the City of Churches, now in sore need, for those blue Mississippians have swept forward into the long out of the unfinished railway, and, flat on their bellies against the southward slope, are pouring their fire into Fowler's men. A fatally good place is a railway cut to shelter a line, when the foe stands fast and contents himself simply with shooting. A fatally bad place it is when the foe won't stand at bay, but comes charging full tilt in spite of the fire, and that, to the amazement of Davis, is just what these infamous Badgers are doing this day. With an onward rush no mere muzzle loaders can possibly check when firing "oblique," the Sixth comes sprinting, taking the Mississippians in turn square in the flank and almost in a twinkling, doubling up and driving together, huddled, helpless, sheep-like, one astonished battalion. Down go the red battle flags. Down go the rifles in answer to shouts of surrender. Some dozen, perhaps, bending double and ducking, manage to scurry off to the west. But Gen. Joe Davis has lost two of his colors and all but a few men of two misguided regiments; and here, too, has the Iron Brigade done more than its full share. Wadsworth is almost weeping with joy at the sudden stem of the torrent and the magnificent stand of his little division, while Doubleday, seldom given to praise, is wringing that veteran's hand in hearty fashion. Doubleday's own men now are fast hurrying up in support of the First division and there is soldier triumph mingled with no little anxiety, as the war-tried leaders note through their glasses the long columns in gray stretching far back toward the horizon, all telling the coming of supporting thousands. A cavalry officer comes galloping in from the right, whither Devlin's brigade has been sent to guard the flank of the line. "Where is Gen. Reynolds?" he asks. "Whole divisions are coming there to the north!" Where, indeed, is Gen. Reynolds? An aide-de-camp is spurring at swift trot through the maze of unlimbering batteries. His face is white, his lips are pale beneath the grimy mustache. He springs from his saddle and says: "Gen. Doubleday, you command, sir—Gen. Reynolds is dead."

And now, far out to the right and rear the boom of cannon grows incessant, and signal men are flagging desperately: "More men are needed! More men are needed!" Howard's corps, the Eleventh, is once more, at one o'clock, facing the very same veterans that swept it from the field at Chancellorsville, and that seem bent on doing the same thing here. Then comes the crisis of the day for the men of the Iron Brigade. Nine field batteries are shelling the westward front of Seminary ridge. Nine brigades have been deployed "cross country" and are now, at three o'clock, bearing down to envelop the grim "stayers" of Doubleday. Here, about the McPherson wood where Reynolds fell, raging old Meredith and gallant Roy Stone hang desperately to their ground. But Roy Stone is soon terribly wounded. Wistar, who springs to his sword, is shot in the face. Meredith is crushed under his falling horse. Fairchild's arm is smashed at the elbow: and Stevens, his lieutenant colonel, is instantly killed: so Mansfield, the major, takes hold of the Black Hats. Morrow, heroic colonel of the Wolverines, with every one of his field and staff officers, sooner or later, is shot. One after another five Michigan sergeants are killed while keeping aloft the sacred colors. Hoosiers, too, and the Seventh Wisconsin are fearfully pelted. Chapman Biddle's brigade, on their left, is hurled back. Baxter is fairly swamped out to their right, and farther still to the north, Ramseur, Rodde and O'Neal, with a triumphant host of yelling confederates, have doubled Robinson's desperately battling division, swept its fragments away: and, with despair in his heart, Howard realizes that the day is lost, that only by the fiercest fighting and the best of luck can he hope to save the remnant of Reynolds' left wing that all the morning held so grandly.

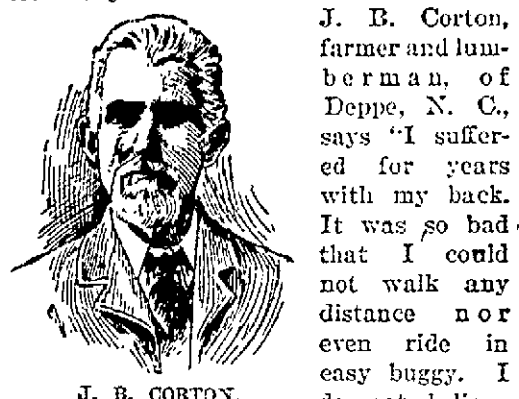

Then it is that the Iron Brigade, still clinging to the McPherson wood, gets the word to fall back to its right rear, covering the Cashtown pike. There it is that they find their comrades of the Sixth Wisconsin sternly facing the coming storm despite the fact that everything seems sweeping away beyond them: and Dawes, their acting colonel, pointing backward into the low ground, shows to the brigade commander's astonished gaze that even Gettysburg is practically lost, and through that town lies their line of retreat—the only way to save those precious guns. Four o'clock, and still the batteries of Hall and Stewart, with three hard-pounded brigades, hold their ground on the ridge, while the valley behind them is fast filling with Ewell's madly exultant men, driving Howard's beaten divisions before them. To hang on longer is simply madness. Beginning at the right, therefore, stern and silent, the devoted brigades give ground slowly, still facing the foe, still firing low and well. The crush comes as the streams of wounded thicken at the outskirts of the town, merging with the fugitives of the Eleventh corps, and the roads and streets are blocked by batteries, ambulances, stray caissons.

Doan's Kidney Pills Brought Strength and Health to the Sufferer, Making Him Feel Twenty-Five Years Younger.

Sick kidneys cause a weak, lame or aching back, and a weak back makes a weak man. Can't be well and strong until the kidneys are cured. Treat them with Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's the testimony of one man cured.

J. B. CORTON. I do not believe I could have raised ten pounds of weight from the ground, the pain was so severe. This was my condition when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly relieved me and now I am never troubled as I was. My back is strong and I can walk or ride a long distance and feel just as strong as I did twenty-five years ago. I think so much of Doan's Kidney Pills that I have given a supply of the remedy to some of my neighbors and they have also found good results. If you can sift anything from this rambling note that will be of any service to you, or to any one suffering from kidney trouble, you are at liberty to do so.

WILL THE RIPPERS RIP?

If the tales coming from Harrisburg are true this great Commonwealth is in the hands of machine rippers who propose to abolish elections by the people and substitute appointment by Governor and the machine will see to it that this official is a subservient tool of the machine. It is said ten thousand offices now filled by the people of the State are to be abolished and in lieu thereof others are to be established to be filled as indicated. The office of Justice of the Peace is to be destroyed and magistrates and marshals to take place of Justices and Constables are to be appointed by Governor. The same is to be done with office of the Poor Director. Boards of Health are to be abolished and a State Bureau with a $10,000 head is to take their place. The voice of the people is to be stifled and the rule of the state is to be turned over to the Machine. What will the members of the legislature of the country districts do? Is it possible that any of the representatives of Adams county will join hands with the machine in the committing of any such proposed outrages on the people. We can not now bring ourselves to believe anything of the kind. To all those who love their country better than their party there can be but one command to obey—thou shalt not rip.—and the basis of this command is according to the old law given Moses—Thou shalt not steal—for the taking of the rights of the people by the machine for the purpose of graft and rake off for the machine will violate in letter and spirit the commandment against stealing.

A Thrilling Experience.

Dr. Harvey M. Stoner is spending part of the winter at Tarpon Springs, Florida. In a letter to his father C. W. Stoner, Esq., he says that he in company with some Philadelphia friends left on the third day of January on one of the Clyde Line Steamers. Very stormy weather was encountered and on the third day on the ocean the steamer caught fire and there was great alarm and excitement among the 200 or more passengers. After the fire was fought for five hours by the crew the steamship finally reached shore at port of Charleston, S. C. It was necessary to call out one of the city fire companies to extinguish the flames. The Steamship company was obliged to charter a railroad train to transport the tourists to Jacksonville, Florida, the steamer's destination.

Ten shares of the capital stock of the Gettysburg National Bank was sold at public auction in front of the Hotel Gettysburg last Saturday afternoon. The first block of five shares was bought by J. W. C. O'Neal at $115.25 and the second lot of 5 shares by same at $115.50.

New Element in Cigar Trade.

The International Cigarmakers' Union has made a ruling which goes into effect at once, raising the price for cigar packing from 6 cents to $1.00 per thousand, low, and the result may be some embarrassment to the manufacturers in this district and perhaps a general shut-down. The manufacturers are not prepared to meet the demand, having contracts for the delivery of cigars based on the former cost of production as to packing. It is said the cause of the raise was a blow aimed at the Ninth District of Pa., the product of which has kept New York and New England bustling to enjoy a profitable trade in the wholesale market. There has been no universal is one of the constitutional diseases. It manifests itself in local aches and pains,—inflamed joints and stiff muscles,—but it cannot be cured by local applications. It requires constitutional treatment acting through the blood, and the best is a course of the great medicine Hood's Sarsaparilla which has permanently cured thousands of cases.

scale governing packers. Cigarmaker's Union No. 316, of McSherrytown, held a spirited meeting on Tuesday evening of last week discussing the situation and other matters. The position of the manufacturers regarding the packers' raised scale remains unchanged. They will probably work up all the stock on hand and ascertain whether their trade will meet the advance in price made necessary by the new ruling of the International Union.

WIRE FENCES ALONG ROADS

White Hall, Jan. 30.—And still another snow storm on Wednesday last. Another blockade to be added to the three previous ones during this winter. From appearances this was the worst of the season. Very little snow remains on the fields, a fierce wind having driven it into the public roads and along post and rail fences, entirely blocking many of our public roads. Upon examination your correspondent observed that very little work is required to open the roads where wire fences have been constructed along both sides of the road, but immediately where the wire ceases and posts and rails begin there the roads are blocked and will require much labor and expense in opening them to the public traffic. I will only add that this is proof sufficient to my mind that post and rail and old worm fences should not hereafter be built along the public road. Money would be saved to the townships if a law was passed requiring the township to furnish all the wire to construct fences along the public highways, doing away with that part of the law requiring a top rail. This would be an inducement for landowners along public roads to construct wire fences and thus be instrumental in keeping the roads from being closed by drifts, closely following every snow fall.

On Saturday, Jan. 21, there was a shooting match in this place for a 1200 lb. bull. There was a large attendance. Much interest was manifested and no doubt much anxiety by those interested.

A gentleman by the name of Hall Thompson from Hunterstown was the lucky winner. Mr. George Morrison did the shooting. The gentleman sold the bull to Melchior Slinguff for $45.00. With one or two exceptions it was a good natured and orderly crowd. Solomon Bupp of near this place, is the champion butcher in this section of country. He informed me that he slaughtered 157 hogs and 10 heaves since the season opened. He is busily engaged nearly every day, having about finished for this season. Mr. Bupp does not know what it is to be idle, as he has plenty of work until spring, making brooms for the farmers who take their broom corn to his place to be made into brooms, at which trade Mr. Bupp is an adept.

A Large Contract.

When L. M. Buehler, the enterprising druggist, first offered a 50 cent package of Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia at half price, and guaranteed to return the money if it did not cure, he thought it probable from his experience with other medicines for these diseases, that he would have a good many packages returned. But although he has sold hundreds of bottles, not one has been brought back.

This is so surprising that he has taken the contract to introduce Dr. Howard's specific in at least half the homes in Gettysburg and to do that he will continue his special half price introductory offer.

L. M. Buehler wants every person in Gettysburg who has constipation, dyspepsia, headaches, or liver trouble to come to his store or send L. M. Buehler 25 cents by mail and get 60 doses of the best medicine ever made at half the regular price, with his personal guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure.

Overcome With Blindness.

A number of the young people of this town who are or have recently attended Shippensburg State Normal School were shocked to learn of a distressing blindness with which a well known young scholar of that institution Miss Martha Dick was stricken. The affliction came while she was engaged in writing a letter when she suddenly exclaimed to her roommate "I can't see." Her father, George Dick of Clear Spring, York county, was notified and took his daughter to John Hopkins Hospital. Several weeks before the event Miss Dick complained of pain in her eyes, which gradually passed away.

First Snapper Soup of Season.

Edward Hoffman, Rural carrier from Hanover formerly of this county had the first snapper soup of the season on Wednesday evening of last week. While driving by Harman's mill race in Berwick township, Adams Co., he was startled by the appearance of a real live snapping turtle which had left its hole in the mud, where it had gone on its long sleep in the fall. Snappers usually remain dormant until the thunder storms of spring awake them.

In the matter of petition of H. T. Weaver to be relieved as surety on recognizance given by Joseph Grollman or Potts to comply with the decree of maintenance of $1.50 a week to his wife, petition set out that he had become surety on the representation that he was to be one of three persons to go on recognizance which had never been done, and that it had already cost him $32 and he asked to be relieved upon surrender of Grollman to the Sheriff. The other side asked that arrears be paid to date, being unpaid from Oct. 1 1904. Court ordered upon payment of arrears, and surrender of defendant to Sheriff, H. T. Weaver should be relieved as surety on recognizance.

MORAL DILEMMAS.

When Man Is Forced to Make a

Choice Between Two Evils.

The rules of logic are unknown to the mass of mankind, but no one possesses of intelligence is without an instinct with the process of balance. Instances. Even the animals use it when they choose between two paths or two actions, as between flight and flight.

Men use it in every dilemma, great or small, from the choice between the simplest actions to the issue of life or death. Is the thing under consideration good or bad? Shall I vote for A or B? Shall I act now or postpone? Shall I take a risk? Shall I stop or go on?

Shall I change my course? Shall I do this or that? In these and other dilemmas we balance the consequences of one alternative against the other and choose what appears to be the better. Facing death in two forms, we choose the better way. Balancing alternatives, one will jump from a high window to the pavement to escape fire.

The moral dilemmas presented to us are not always limited to a clear choice between right and wrong. It is wrong to steal, but should one starve or permit those dependent on him to starve rather than steal? It is right to tell the truth, but should one tell the truth when it involves the betrayal of his comrades, his country, his family?

It is wrong to deceive, but would not one be justified in deceiving the enemy who would destroy him? It is wrong to kill, but may not one kill in self defense?

The problem of morals presses constantly upon the human race, presenting to each individual in turn new trials, difficulties and repugnant choices. Each must to a large degree choose his own way to fight his own battle. These are the facts which confuse our ethical counselors. It is not possible to act always in exact harmony with our moral code. If one is so placed that he can save his mother from starvation only by stealing, he will violate the fifth commandment if he permits her to starve, and he will violate the eighth commandment if he chooses to steal. The choice between two evils often comes to the individual suddenly and imperatively. He must act at once, rendering a decision for which there is often no precedent known to him. The Decalogue, which he can recite, the philosophical analysis of the evolutions of ethics, do not aid him.

He who is thus tried and who desires to do right will choose the course which is least evil. He will balance the alternatives, exactly as does the one who jumps to the pavement rather than remain in the burning building.—

From "Balance: The Fundamental Verity," by Orlando J. Smith.

A Tricky Skipper.

"Talking about rats," said a stevered-on a Sixth street pier, "reminds me of a pretty slick trick I witnessed the other day on the part of a down east skipper who wished to rid the ship of a number of troublesome rodents. His vessel was moored near to an English freighter, and he noticed that she was taking in a quantity of cheese. So one evening he found an excuse for hauling out to her and taking his own packet alongside. The next step was to procure a plank, smear it well with an odoriferous preparation of red herring, and place it through an open port on board the Englishman. The result was that during the night there was a wholesale immigration of rats from the American ship's hold to the cheese laden vessel alongside."—New

The applicant went away.

Japanese Toys.

"Our children," says a Japanese lady,

"are not children long, and we can do most with them when they are little.

Then we show them only beautiful things, you know—only beautiful things

AN AMATEUR

(Original.)

"Those people," said the medical student, "who are always telling an invalid just what's the matter with him and recommending some peculiar treatment are a nuisance."

"I was once very much benefited by one of these amateur physicians," replied the artist.

"You? How?"

"You know Ned Bradley?"

"Yes; a simpleton. He's one of that kind—knows more about medicine than a whole school of doctors. Did he doctor you?"

"Well, yes. I was feeling very bad one spring, and in the midst of my ailings ran across Ned. I know what's the matter with you," he said. "It's your heart." Going to a closet he brought out a stethoscope and clapped it to my heart. He listened awhile, then rushed off to a case where he kept half a dozen medical books with such titles as 'One's Own Doctor,'

'Medicine Made Easy' and the like, and, taking one of them, he hunted through the leaves till he found 'heart disease.' After reading what it said he reluctantly informed me that I was liable to drop down dead at any moment."

"Of course you submitted the case to a physician?"

"That's what I should have done, but I dared not lest he should confirm what Bradley had said. Instead I went about expecting each day would be my last. The flesh melted from my bones. I lost my strength. I was on the verge of collapse. Then I began to make preparations for my death. I had $50,000 in government bonds and no relative in the world to whom to leave them. The only person I loved was Mary Klagget, and Mary was receiving the attentions of Alex Mac-Arthur. Nevertheless, my affection for her was of the true kind. We had been chums at school, hunted butterflies together in summer and skated together in winter. Then, when we grew older, we read the same books, thought the same thoughts, had similar aspirations. All went well till MacArthur appeared; then I dropped away. But I loved Mary so well that I resolved to leave her my bonds.

"After that I went downhill at toboggan speed. Somehow I felt averse to meeting people—they bore an invalid so, asking how he feels, and all that—so I kept at home and at last took to my bed. I called in a doctor and took any quantity of medicines, but none of them did me any good."

"Did you tell him about your heart disease?"

"No; I preferred to have him make his own diagnosis. At least, this is the excuse I made to myself for not telling him. The truth is, I didn't dare tell him, for fear his reply would end the business at once. When I got so low that I thought I wouldn't last much longer I resolved to send for Mary and give her my property. When she came and saw my condition she burst into tears.

"Mary," I said, "you remember how we used to play together, read the same books—what pleasant times we had in each other's companionship? Well, all this made me the only being in the world to me. Now I'm going to leave you. There is the key to my box in the safe deposit company, and here is a paper making you a present of the contents. You will find there fifty $1,000 United States bonds. Take them, and may Alex MacArthur make you happy."

"She just bent down over me and whispered:

"You have made a great mistake."

"And you're not going to marry

Alex?"

"No."

"You don't love him?"

"How could I when I have always loved somebody else?"

"She said this so softly and looked at me so tenderly out of her brimming eyes that I began to suspect I had made a fool of myself in drawing out of the race so easily.

"Mary," I whispered, "is it I you love?"

"Yes; and if you get well we will enjoy life together."

"And if not?"

"Then I don't want your bonds."

"She was sitting on the bed beside me, my arms about her, and her cheek down against mine. The door opened and I walked Ned Bradley

"I'll be," he said, "I've found out there's nothing the matter with you after all."

"What?"

"You're well enough, so far as your heart is concerned."

"Then what did you mean by telling me that I was liable to drop at any moment?"

"I got hold of the wrong book."

"He was going on to explain, but I grasped a pitcher that stood on a table beside my bed, and as he vanished out of the door the crockery splintered all over the floor. I sank back exhausted by the effort, for I had really brought myself down to a low state by worrying, and gasped for breath. Mary put some liquor to my lips and revived me.

"Mary called a servant and ordered a carriage. In half an hour we were bowling along a fine road, and I was coming up famously. Mary stuck to me for a fortnight, at the end of which time I was as strong as ever."

"Upon my word," said the medical student, "I didn't know you could be such a fool."

"An artist should have a strong imagination, you know. I've always felt kindly toward Ned Bradley because he was the means of bringing me and my wife together."

"Humph," grunted the medical student. "Suppose he had killed you?"

DENNIS D. RODMAN.

He Swagged On to Death as He Had Swagged Through Life.

The O'Gorman Mahon was about eighty years of age when I met him for the first time. One could still see what a lion of a man he had been. He was over six feet high. He had still an immense mass of snow white hair, and he had a long, white beard. The face was long and horse shaped, the eyes were still bright and fierce and defiant, and the voice had a deep note like the roar of an enraged lion. The O'Gorman Mahon was the very pluck of old fashioned courtesy, but one could easily see what a man he had been. He was the great duelist of his day, a survival of the squires who live in the pages of the chroniclers of Ireland before the Union. He had been out dozens if not scores of times, and there was a story of his fighting some three duels all in a morning.

It was curious that he stuck to the old dueling gospel to the end. I never saw a man so disgusted as he was when he found that Mr. Parnell would not send a challenge to Sir William

Harcourt for some insulting language which Sir William had used to the Irish chief. I can still recall the scene.

It took place at one of the tables in the tearoom of the house of commons.

The old warrior turned up at the consultation, looking almost radiant. He sniffed the dueling ground from afar.

Some two or three of the then young colleagues of Parnell were present, and this idea of a challenge appeared to their modern minds, of course, as something grotesque. But the O'Gorman Mahon had come in perfect faith that a duel was a certainty, and his long, horse shaped face became visibly longer as Parnell calmly said that he did not regard dueling as rational or necessary. The old gentleman was too polite to express his real feelings, but the pained silence which followed the announcement of Parnell sufficiently revealed what he felt.

During the all night sittings of the eighties the O'Gorman Mahon was always in his place. He made it almost a point of vanity never to be absent when any such work was going. He wore the same suit of clothes winter and summer. It was a curious light colored heavy tweed. Somehow or other it seemed to accord with the white mane and the white beard. He also was a great smoker, but instead of a cigar he used to smoke the democratic pipe, and, if I mistake not, the tobacco was both strong and cheap. He could tell very strange tales of the old days in Ireland and in many other parts of the world too. He had fought in some of the many civil wars of the southern hemisphere and had many marvels to relate of earthquakes, revolutions and other natural and human phenomena in those faroff regions.

I was with the gallant old fellow within a few hours of his death. He died as he had lived. He was full of the round oaths of the eighteenth century, had his drink to the last, joked about his ninety years, refused all consolations, temporal or spiritual, and swagged off to death as he often had done to the dueling ground. He was the last of a race.—M. A. P.

Starts In Life.

Some of the men of education have had to start as rag sorters. A surprising number have begun with dishwashing. Among them I have known a musician and two seminatists who have become waiters; a bricklayer who now owns a hotel and is worth $100,-

000; a civil engineer who threw aside the dish rag for a porter's job and, after seven years' hard work and saving, has just become a partner in a prosperous express and shipping business.

A typical case is that of a young doctor who came to America to make his fortune with a bundle of spare dollars in his pocket. He tramped about New York for weeks to find work to suit him. He was starving before a friendly Comstock cook got him a chance to wash dishes. He lost his self respect, he said, and seemed to fall lower and lower until he resolved to learn English and a trade. He is now a skilled ladies' tailor and earns $25 a week during the busy season.—World's Work.

Ancient Tailors' Laws.

An old law in England in force in 1781 contained the following six clauses: Any tailor who joined a union was to be sent to jail for two months.

Tailors must work from 5 o'clock in the morning until 8 at night. Wages were not to be higher than 48 cents a day. Each tailor was to be allowed 3 cents for breakfast. Any tailor who refused to work was to be imprisoned for a more than two months. If any employer paid his workmen he was to be fined $25, or if the workmen who took the increase were to be sent to jail for two months.

A Hard Pie Crust.

A good story is told of a Barry lady who in making some pie mistook plaster of paris for flour and did not find out her mistake until the pie had been served up. For once pie crusts and promises bore no similarity, and the pie was buried in the back garden, and unless he is discovered in the future as Roman remains.—Western Mail.

ADAMS COUNTY HAS THIRTY-ONE NURSERIES.

Number About One Fifth of Whole Number in State—San Jose Scale Decreasing in State.

The Nurseries of Pennsylvania are of vast importance. According to the last bulletin of Pennsylvania Dept. of Agriculture, there 169 nurseries in this State, 31 of which are located in Adams County, more people being engaged in this business in this County than any other County in the State. As the bulletin declares, not only does this State grow many more fruit trees than are needed for home use, but in the nurseries of this Commonwealth is grown most of the ornamental stock sold in the eastern parts of the United States.

We have a very effective system of Nursery inspection, which is proven by the fact that in the south eastern portion of our State, the number of nurseries in which the San Jose Scale occurred, as found by the State Inspector, has decreased as follows: 89 per cent in 1902; 61 percent in 1903 and only 40 percent in 1904.

The State Nurserymen's Association met in Harrisburg on Jan. 16th and 17th, and among other matters discussed what Legislation was best in regard to the San Jose Scale.

We append the Adams County list of nurserymen growing stock, and their nurseries have been inspected and have certificates permitting them to make sales, except in one case the certificate is pending, with acres devoted to the business.

Could not Keep House Without Downs' Elixir.

Those whose duty it is to provide for the family health, naturally feel a sense of security when they know they have at hand an unfailing remedy for that most common of all diseases "hard cold."

Mr. A. B. Moody, Tupper Lake, N. Y., writing us under date of Feb'y. 16, 1902, said: "I have used Downs' Elixir and consider it a very valuable remedy for coughs, colds and all lung troubles—in fact could not keep house without it."

Downs' Elixir is sold everywhere and money refunded if not satisfactory.

The politician gets the plums: Of course, it is no theft

The meek reformer gets the crumbs: Of comfort that is left.

STARTLING BUT TRUE. People the world over were horrified on learning of the burning of a Chicago theater in which nearly six hundred people lost their lives, yet more than five times this number or over 3,000 people died from pneumonia in Chicago during the same year, with scarcely a passing notice. Every one of these cases of pneumonia resulted from a cold and could have been prevented by timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. A great many who had every reason to fear pneumonia have wasted it off by the prompt use of this remedy. The following is an instance of this sort: "Too much cannot be said in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and especially for colds and influenza. I know that it cured my daughter, Laura, of a severe cold, and I believe saved her life when she was threatened with pneumonia." W. D. Wilcox, Logan, New York. Sold by J. H. Huber, Druggist.

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY THE MOTHER'S FAVORITE.—The soothing and healing properties of this remedy, its pleasant taste and prompt and permanent cures have made it a favorite with people everywhere. It is especially prized by mothers of small children, for colds, croup, and whooping cough, as it always affords quick relief, and as it contains no opium or other harmful drug, it may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. Your liver must be in fine condition if you would feel buoyant, happy and hopeful, bright of eye, light of step, vigorous and successful in your pursuits. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J.
